Are you and your spouse contemplating divorce and seeking a more collaborative, less costly means of resolving your differences? Consider scheduling a complimentary thirty (30) minute session with Luke D. Griffith, Esquire, to determine if Mediation at Weinberg, Kaplan & Smith, is the right option for your family.

What is Mediation?

Mediation gives both you and your spouse the opportunity to discuss issues in a private, confidential setting with a neutral professional.

Why should we mediate?

Mediation allows you and your spouse to create an Agreement that is specifically tailored to serve the best interests of your family. You collectively retain control over your future and the timeline to resolution. The Mediator insures the privacy of both spouses' information discussed in Mediation.

How does it work and what is the cost?

You may schedule an initial, complimentary meet and greet to understand the Mediation process and determine if Mediation is the best option for your family. Should you and your spouse choose to move forward, the first session can occur immediately after the meet and greet, or be scheduled for another convenient time.

Once the Agreement to Mediate is signed, the Mediator will collect a limited retainer from which all work between sessions will be deducted at the same hourly rate as the Mediation sessions.

All payments for Mediation sessions are charged on an hourly basis and due upon the conclusion of each session.
